About Far Eastern Federal University

The Far Eastern Federal University (FEFU) is an age-old, reputed university. The Far Eastern Federal University came into existence in 1899, which makes it 122 years old. The FEFU is located in Vladivostok, in the eastern part of Russia. Though the university is old, as we said above, the medical faculty needs more depth of experience, as it became operational in 2013, and English-medium instruction began in 2016. More than 500 international students are currently enrolled in the General Medicine program, receiving instruction from highly skilled and experienced faculty members. Also, the medical centre associated with the School of Medicine is reportedly one of the best in the Russian Federation. The laboratories at the medical school are also state-of-the-art, and the students participate in research work alongside the academicians at the school.
